Defendants.)

Based on good cause shown and the United States’ Ex Parte Motion for Alternative Victim Notification Pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3771(d)(2), THE COURT FINDS THAT:

- (1) this case falls within the “multiple crime victims” provision of § 3771(d)(2);
- (2) it is impracticable, based on the number of potential crime victims, to individually identify all the victims in this case and accord them the notice and the rights described in § 3771(a);
- (3) the plan of the United States to employ the Justice Department’s website for large cases to provide notice to the large number of potential victims in this case is a reasonable procedure to give effect to the provisions of § 3771.

1 Accordingly, THE COURT ORDERS THAT the United States is authorized to employ the
2 Justice Department's website for large cases in order to provide notice to the large number of potential
3 victims in this case as described in the United States' Ex Parte Motion for Alternative Victim
4 Notification Pursuant to 18 U.S.C. § 3771(d)(2).

5 IT IS SO ORDERED.
